

Laura Wakefield earned her B.S. in Political Science/Social Studies Education from Florida State University and a Master of Arts degree in History from the University of Central Florida as a James Madison Fellow. A National Board-Certified history teacher, she was recognized as the National Middle School Social Studies Teacher of the Year in 1995. Laura was the author/director of three Teaching American History (TAH) grants and provided professional development for history teachers prior to her retirement from teaching in 2018.